Youth Banquet Features Talks on The Better World

The banquet for youth and youth leaders that was a part of the program of the annual convention of the New York State Council of Churches and Religious Education, was held in the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church on Friday evening at 6 o'clock, featuring as speakers Dr. Harry Thomas Stock of Boston and the Rev. Laurence T. Hosie of New York city.

Miss Helen Bates of Kingston, representing the Ulster County Christian Youth Council, acted as toastmaster at the banquet which was attended by approximately 100 youth and leaders of youth. After the banquet the assemblage moved to the lecture room of the church where it listened to two addresses by Dr. Stock and the Rev. Mr. Hosie, each dealing with a portion of the plan of youth building a better world.

Considers Four Worlds

Dr. Stock began his discourse by using the Old Dutch graveyard as an opening to explain that those pioneers that were buried there had long ago founded Kingston with the object in view of building a better world where living conditions would be equally good for all. They had followed certain ideals and had built with the hope of creating that place where equality would reign, and that now modern youth was faced with the problem of bettering those ideals, adding to them with modern methods and ways of accomplishing that better world.

The Boston minister pointed out that there were four points that should receive the attention of youth in its quest for that better world. These four points were: Aware, care, prepare and dare. Youth today are not aware of the conditions about them, he said. Young people oftimes fail to see the social injustice because of serfish virtues, and in order to build that better world they must be aware of how others exist, what they think and do, and how can others be helped to a better means of living. When youth has become aware of conditions, then youth must begin to care concerning what is transpiring about him. "Your ancestors, those pioneers that rest in peace uptown beside that church, were aware that things were not as they should be and they cared enough to go about building a better place in which conditions could be remedied."

Then when the speaker had explained those two points, he said that youth must be prepared to face life as it is and to supply the necessary changes, and that they could prepare best by communion with God through sincere prayer and solid thinking, and not through reliance on others such as "the way to solve your problems is to vote for so and so." And then when young people had become aware of conditions, had begun to have care concerning these conditions, had prepared to cope with these situations—then they should have the spirit whereby they would dare to work for unpopular causes. Youth would oftimes have to give up ideals tto work for others. "Today it is not a devation to America to be simply as that of those pioneers of years ago, but rather an urge to press forward with courage and devotion to make a b etter world."

Church at the Crossroads.

Following Dr. Stock's address, the Rev. Mr. Hosie, of the Judson Memorial Baptist Church of New York city was introduced as the second speaker of the evening. Douglas Wheeler of Peekskill, who was also scheduled to speak, did not appear, but sent a communication which was read partially by Miss Helen Bates.

The Rev. Mr. Hosie first located his church as being in a district which was a wee bit radical, catering to different classes of people. He termed it "the church at the crossroads," because of the meeting at this center of all kinds of people with all sorts of ideals. He pointed out that one of the largest jobs as the minister of this church was to teach peoeple to understand the various viewpoints of this world and to make them able to allow for others besids themselves to have correct ideas concerning the building of a better world.

One of the Rev. Mr. Hosie's main points was the fact that brotherhood is one of the best ways towards making a better world. But he warned of the fact that "many persons were in love with the ideal of brotherhood rather than with folks themselves," and "one of the most dangerous men in the modern world is an idealist." That is one of the biggest problems facing youth in its quest for building a better world—a feeling of fellowship and brotherhood that will not allow the harboring of any hatred for others, and character that will really believe and practice that which it thinks about.

A surprising idea was submitted by the speaker in the statement that "money is a highly charged symbol of our civilization because it represents lives given for lives, thus creating a brotherhood that many young people little realize." It carries the lesson that youth should care for those who are bound to them by invisible ties, and that this can be furthered by seeking to understand the lives of others in a more interested manner. This must all be taken into consideration in youth building a better world.

Group Conference

After the termination of the addresses, Dr. Harry Stock led in a brief period of conference discussion on the problems of young people's organizations in church activities. Quite a few availed themselves of the opportunity to bring before the assembled group the troubles that were confronting their respective societies, and to receive counsel from Dr. Stock concerning ways of meeting these problems. Then the meeting was adjourned to St. James Church in time for the General Convocation.

Trifles Make Perfection

The great Italian sculptor, Michelangelo, was once visited by an acquaintance, who remarked, on entering his studio: "Why, you have done nothing to that figure since I was here last." "Yes," was the reply; "I have softened this expression, touched off that projection, and made other improvements." "Oh!" said the visitor, "those are mere trifles." "True," answered Michelangelo, "but remember that trifles make perfection; and perfection is no trifle."

Have an Objective And Stick to It Is Mr. Noble's Advice

Pastors and laymen in attendance upon the district convention of the New York Council of Churches enjoyed a fine chicken dinner served by the ladies of the Fair Street Reformed Church Friday noon.

Following the dinner Dr. Seeley, pastor of the church, introduced the Rev. Dr. Charles C. Noble, pastor of Christ M. E. Church, Glens Falls, who spoke on the necessity of having an objective and sticking to it, applying the thought to laymen, ministers and churches. Said he, "If you are not going anywhere you won't get any place." He found that religion was anaemic today because people don't expect much of it.

Dr. Noble referred to ministers who have no program, no objective, but are just "muddling through; of people who may at one time have had ideals, but who have not held true to them; of school teachers who started out with ideals, with a determination to make something of their profession, who gradually learned that they could get by by cutting corners, by slighting their work, by using old stuff over again and so have gradually lost the fine ideals with which they started; of marriages that have gone on to the rocks because of a lack of ideals.

"Set yourself something to do and stick to it," said the speaker, quoting Coach Rice's remark that it was "getting tired" that cost crews races. "Religion is a thing of words until it is tried out," was a concluding thought.

DON'T BE A VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANCES!

Every man who spends less than he makes, and regularly deposits the difference in this 85-year-old institution will find himself steadily being richer — and more independent.

Someone has said that "'Tis no crime to be poor" and that is true, but it ought to be where a man remains poor because of a habit of spending all and more than he earns.

A man with a growing savings account is a master of circumstances.

IT SHOULD BE REPEALED

Governor Landon is right when he says the new tax law passed by the recent Congress taxing undistributed corporate surpluses is a cock-eyed piece of legislation. Sufficient time has not elapsed to enable the public to determine the full effect of this act but common sense must condemn it without waiting to see its ultimate results.

We summarize some of its faults:

It discriminates against the small corporations. By preventing the accumulation of earnings big corporations will stay big and the small business companies will stay small.

It retards business recovery and prevents the employment of people who would obtain work through business development. Business cannot go forward as it should if a proper share of the earnings cannot be utilized for expansion.

It will cripple many small concerns to the point of bankruptcy. If a business owing large debts must pay out its earnings in dividends instead of reducing its debts, it inevitably faces disaster.

It removes the stabilizing factor against recurrent depressions. If some of the large corporations had not had substantial reserves to rely upon during the recent depression many of them would have either failed or been compelled to so reduce their operations as to greatly aggravate the difficulties.

It gives officials of the government control over the business of the country that it should exert. The board of directors of a corporation are the proper officers to determine the financial policy of the business and if they do so in conformity with the law and public interest the government has no right to meddle with their decisions.

There are other objections to the law but these are sufficient to make it urgent that the next Congress vote its repeal.

TRAILER SPENDING.

There have been numerous gloomy forecasts about the increasing number of auto trailers and houses on wheels that take their occupants off the realty tax lists and create new financial problems for the communities in which they park for long or short periods. Now comes a defender who says that the trailerite is far from being a tax dodger. "Wherever he goes," says this observer, "he leaves money along the way—for food, clothing, parking privileges, electricity, gasoline and oil, auto repairs—for nearly everything he would spend money for at home. He registers his car and settles at home, and pays a direct tax. And he pays his share of indirect taxes along the way. The trailerite gets nothing free except air and the view."

Some states require trailer-dwellers to pay tuition for their children in public schools, and also to pay local registration fees for car and trailer. Some parking spots are free, but many charge from $1 to $5 a week for use of a small plot of ground and the conveniences provided with it. The trailer population, it appears as you go into the matter, doesn't do as much sponging on settled residents or as much dodging of responsibility as critics have said.

ADAPTABLE INDUSTRIES

Diversification is as important in industry as in agriculture. At least, the ability to turn certain skills and tools from the manufacture of one product to the manufacture of others quite different is essential to survival in some concerns. Changes in automobile design and construction, for example, are compelling certain other manufacturers to modify or completely revise their own industries.

An auto parts manufacturer had concentrated for some years on making windshield frames for one large auto concern. The 1937 model of that car builds the windshield right into the body of the car and consequently requires no windshield frame. Unless the frame maker can find a new market or adapt his plant to a new product quickly, he will be out of luck. Other manufacturers have had similar experiences. It is a reassuring fact that so many of them have shown ingenuity and courage in making the necessary changes and holding their own in a swiftly moving industrial world. In some cases the diversification and new products have become more profitable than the old.

HINDRANCE TO BUILDING

Great Britain's building recovery, which preceded ours by several years and is now well advanced, is mainly a result of two things, says the Architectural Forum. These are the "single mortgage" system, by which payments are simplified and made uniform, and cooperation of builders and building trades. Some progress has been made lately in America in the first of these improvements, but the second lags.

Another British advantage is the simplification of property taxes and their adjustment on the ability of property to pay. "In Great Britain," explains the Forum, "real property is taxed according to its income rather than, as in the United States, according to its capital value." Vacant land and some classes of vacant buildings are not taxed. Thus England avoids the inconsistency of demanding heavy taxes from owners whose property is producing nothing to pay the taxes with. And thus "the English speculative builder can pick up land at a price which does not have to take into account a backlog of taxes, and is therefore a great deal cheaper than equivalent acreage here."

Disloyalty

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

Discussing one's children with one's friends is really a form of disloyalty, and many parents are guilty of it. The very mother who is shocked because her son has been talking her over with his chum, would not hesitate to produce the boy and his personal peculiarities and problems as a topic of conversation at afternoon tea with her friends.

It is a poor rule that does not work both ways. To air one's soiled linen in public is always bad taste. But many persons do.

Any group of mothers is nearly sure at some time during their conversation to talk over their children. Mrs. Smith reports a conversation she had with Mary the other day: Mrs. Jones tells a funny story about her Jane's story which Jane would hate to have known; Mrs. Brown tells, in confidence, of course, what Henry told her also in confidence, in a moment of confidence. Afterward Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Brown go home and retail all the intimate trifles they have gleaned to father and the children. Mary and Jane and Henry feel like butterflies on pins the next time they see each other. How can one confide in a mother who cannot or will not hold her tongue? Mothers don't seem to realize.

Of course this kind of mother soon finds herself excluded from her children's inner lives. They hide what they can of their thoughts and actions, and put up as well as they can with whatever undesirable publicity they still have to endure. Mothers who win the trust and respect of their children will guard their secrets with the utmost care, and never, even to prove a moot point, repeat what they have seen or heard. A mother, by virtue of her position has an unfair advantage over her child; she knows too much.

Latitude of a place is its angular distance from the equator and is measured by an arc of the meridian between the zenith and the equator. Longitude of a place is measured by the arc of the equator intercepted between the prime meridian and the meridian passing through the place, or by the angle at the pole between these two meridians.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: To clear Terence Mahony of suspicion as the murderer of Vincent Little, Ruth Fraser has told the police that Terence was fetching her back to London from the home of a school friend in the country at the time of the Little affair. It is not true, although it is true that Terence was rescuing Ruth from kidnappers. Now so that Terence may see what kind of man Ruth's guardian, Lee-Ramsden, is Ruth is taking Terence home to lunch — and this pleases Lee-Ramsden enormously, for it was he who had paid Ambrose Lawson to kidnap his ward.

Chapter 18

LEE-RAMSDEN SCORES

"WHAT kind of a man is your guardian?" asked Mahony. "Do you get on well with him?"

"Oh, yes," she answered. "He's a bit cynical and . . . and inhuman, but he's very good company and easy to get on with. I think you'll like him."

"I wonder whether he'll like me?" said Mahony rather gloomily. "I don't seem frightfully popular this morning."

After this remark there was a brief silence between them.

"You're rather in love with Miss, aren't you?" Ruth finally asked.

"What's that?" said Mahony in a startled tone, and he blushed.

"You had a sort of yearning look," she explained.

She rose abruptly from the table.

"I'll go and ring up Uncle Gerald," she went on. "That is, if they've got a telephone in this horrible place. I do think it's a horrible place, don't you? I wonder why we came here? And such beastly coffee."

She departed in search of a telephone. Mahony remained at the table, frowning fiercely and taking occasional sips at his bad coffee. Ruth's remark that he was rather in love with Elsa had disturbed him.

"Still yearning," said Ruth's voice by the table. "I've 'phoned Mullins, the butler and told him to expect a guest."

"Oh! Right. Then I suppose we'd better be moving," said Mahony.

He paid the bill and they left the café. Twenty minutes later they arrived at Ruth's home.

Lee-Ramsden welcomed Mahony with accustomed pleasant geniality.

"I've heard of you," he said. "You're back from China, aren't you? You must tell me all about it; I lived there myself twenty years ago. But I didn't know you knew Ruth."

"Oh, yes, we're quite old friends," said Ruth. "Mr. Mahony brought me home last night."

Lee-Ramsden did not comment on that remark.

"Shall we go into the study? You'll take a glass of sherry before lunch, I hope," he suggested.

THEY went into the study and Lee-Ramsden poured out the sherry. After he had handed Mahony a glass, he indicated the midday edition of the evening paper, which was lying on the table. In big letters across the top was the headline:

FILM STAR'S UNCLE MURDERED

"Shocking affair that," he observed. "Have you seen the evening paper yet? Poor Little's been killed."

"Yes, I know," said Ruth. "We . . . as a matter of fact, we've just come from Elsa's house."

"Oh, you have," said Lee-Ramsden in a tone of interest. "Been paying a visit of condolence, I suppose. How is Elsa? I expect she's taken it very much to heart, hasn't she?"

"Yes," said Ruth.

"Was anybody else there?" asked Lee-Ramsden.

"Mr. Lawson. And a man named Inspector Kennedy," answered Ruth.

"Kennedy?" said Lee-Ramsden in a tone of surprise. "But he was here only a few minutes ago making enquiries about you."

"Oh!" said Ruth. She hadn't quite expected that. "What did he want to know?" she asked.

Mahony rose from his seat. He had had enough of this beating about the bush. When a difficulty had to be faced, he liked to face it and get it over.

"I didn't go there with Miss Fraser; I met her there by accident," he stated quietly. "I went there with a man named Lawson. A police officer was there—Inspector Kennedy, from Scotland Yard. In his presence, and Lawson's, Miss Little accused me of being the murderer of her uncle. She said that she recognised my voice as that of the man who was in the room when her uncle was killed."

There was no explosion. Lee-Ramsden's handsome, aquiline features hardly changed in expression. He raised one eyebrow very slightly.

"How very annoying for you—especially if you did kill her uncle," he commented lightly. "Are you supposed to have killed the old gentleman before or after you brought my ward home?"

"I told Inspector Kennedy that Mr. Mahony could not have murdered Mr. Little, because he was with me," put in Ruth.

"Indeed. Was Mr. Mahony also staying with your old school friend?" asked Lee-Ramsden ironically.

He sipped his sherry, looked from Ruth to Mahony, and continued in the same tone of mild irony.

"I don't profess to know what's happened, and perhaps I'm too old and stupid to be told, but I can't help feeling that somehow you two young people have got yourselves into a devil of a mess. It may interest you to know that Inspector Kennedy was making enquiries about both of you. I have an idea that he rather doubts your old school friend story."

"It wasn't my story; it was your story; you told me to tell it," protested Ruth heatedly. "I told you what really happened—that I was kidnapped, but you wouldn't believe me."

"Yes, that's true," admitted Lee-Ramsden. "But you couldn't tell me who kidnapped you, or where you were taken, or who rescued you, and during your absence I received none of the demands for ransom or other sensational consequences of a genuine kidnapping—well, my dear, your story didn't sound very convincing, did it? If you'd only brought Mr. Mahony in with you, or told me his name——"

"But he wouldn't come in, and he wouldn't tell me his name," interrupted Ruth. "I didn't know his name till I met him at Elsa's this morning."

"These heroes are very modest, aren't they?" said Lee-Ramsden blandly.

He paused and looked at Mahony, and the expression of good-natured irony had quite left his face; his glance was keen and piercing.

"Or perhaps you had some other reason for wishing to conceal your nocturnal activities," he went on in a harder tone. "Did the inspector question you at any length about them? I'd like you to tell me exactly what took place at this interview at the Littles' house."

MAHONY told him. When Mahony had finished, Lee-Ramsden made slight gesture as if marvelling at human foolishness.

"You began by telling the inspector that you'd been walking about London till a late hour," he commented. "Then Ruth came in and said that you hadn't been walking about London, you'd been motoring with her. Naturally he doesn't believe either of your stories. And if we tell him now that Ruth was kidnapped and you rescued her, he won't believe that either. Unless you can produce proof that she was kidnapped and you rescued her. Can you?"

"No," answered Mahony.

"No," echoed Lee-Ramsden. "And at the inquest on Little the chances are that you'll both be questioned about your movements. By that time Inspector Kennedy will probably have obtained proof that Ruth was not staying with Anne Dowson during her absence. May I ask what you propose to say?"

Mahony made no answer. It was obvious that Lee-Ramsden was right; they would be questioned at the inquest. And he did not see what the devil they could say.

"Your first story of walking about will be brought up and contrasted with Ruth's story that you were motoring back from the country. People will say that you lied in order to save Ruth from scandalous talk, and that she lied in order to save you from being arrested, and that, anyway, you're both no better than you should be. Nothing you say now either of you is going to be believed without indisputable proof. And if you're not arrested, you're both going to be the objects of a lot of unpleasant gossip."

This, as Mahony realized with blank dismay, was also perfectly true. For himself he did not mind. But Ruth's name would be coupled with his; he could imagine the kinds of things people would be saying about them.

The butler entered and announced that lunch was served. Lee-Ramsden rose.

"Even if we are going to be talked about, we needn't starve," he said. "Come down and have some lunch."

Lunch was a silent meal. Mahony was perplexed and worried, and he did not in the least know what to make of his host. Judging by his manner the things he had learned before lunch had not disturbed him at all. Mahony understood what Ruth had meant when she said her guardian was a little unhuman.

That Body of Yours

SHOCK CAUSE OF GOITRE

A physician friend of mine was very irritable and excitable with rapid heart beat—110 to the minute. Suspecting goitre he had a metabolism test which showed overactivity of his thyroid gland and he had the gland removed by surgery. Three weeks after the operation his pulse was down to normal—72, but even some months afterward he was not entirely free of some of the symptoms of goitre. In other words while the operation "slowed down" his heart rate and body processes, it could not entirely change some of his emotional and mental characteristics. He was born with them.

Dr. I. Bram, in the American Journal of Psychiatry, states that after studying 5,000 cases of Grave's disease (the severe or exopthalmic type of goitre) he came to the conclusion that there exists a definite predisposition or tendency to this ailment.

The earmarks which characterize a young adult with this predisposition to goitre are (a) extreme brightness or keenness about anything, (b) emotional excitability, (c) excitable heart, (d) brilliant, sparkling eyes and (f) an enlarged thyroid gland.

Dr. Bram states further, "the average candidate for exopthalmic goitre (likely to be afflicted with it) is an idealist, unable to fight his way in the world without getting too many scars, setbacks or discouragements."

In this series of cases, 90 per cent presented a clear history of shock or other disturbance to the mental system which was followed by Grave's disease. In 4 per cent there was some infection (teeth, tonsils, gall bladder). In 3 per cent taking iodine or thyroid tablets to reduce weight was the cause and in 3 per cent the cause could not be discovered.

Among the psychic or mental factors are listed: (1) accidents, narrow escapes and similar occurrences present in 35 per cent of the cases; (2) shock following death of a loved one occurred in 32 per cent of the cases; (3) repeated psychic shocks finally resulted in the disease; (4) worry over real or imaginary illness; (5) intense worry over financial reverses and distress; (6) worry over work or study.

Now while every physician studying the cause of Grave's disease (rapid heart, bulging eyes, trembling hands, enlarged thyroid gland) will not agree that 90 per cent of the cases are due to mental or emotional shock or distress, he will agree that these "shocks" to those with a "predisposition" to this ailment greatly outnumber the other causes—infection, use of thyroid extract, and others.

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Publicly there is a veritable moral crusade against that suddenly awful thing, the indirect tax. Privately, however, those tax experts who for years have sweated to find new sources of revenue to pay for the ever increasing load of benefits foresee indirect taxes continuing into the long distant future.

The question of direct or indirect taxation is not one which concerns only congress. The states as well are brought persistently face to face with the question of whether to clap on a tax that every voter will see and kick about or to let him become acquainted with the tax indirectly by levying it upon some business or industry which in turn will levy it upon the public.

Called Academic Matter

TO MANY this matter of indirect taxes seems quite academic. A corporate income tax is a direct tax upon a corporation, but few doubt that such a tax often is passed on to the consumer in the price of the corporation's products.

Minnesota has a virtual monopoly upon the richest iron deposits in the country. When Minnesota taxes them the big steel companies, which own many of the deposits, know it is a direct tax. But does the Dakota wheat farmer also know it when he buys a sheet iron roof for a granary?

A federal tax is imposed on North Carolina tobacco manufacturers. To them it is a direct tax. But when hitched to the price of cigarettes is it known to the Montana sheep herder who pauses in the shade of a juniper for a smoke?

Even direct taxation develops queer quirks. Across southern Idaho lie the highly taxable rails of the Oregon Short Line. Blaine county is far from the main line, but needs money for schools and highways. So, like a long arm, one strip of Blaine county reaches clear around the county that lies between it and the railroad. By that means it reaches a 17 mile strip of main line railroad upon which to levy a direct tax.

But does the New Yorker, nibbling at an Oregon apple hauled across that 18 miles of railroad, know that part of the freight on the apple went to taxes, and that he is helping to pay for Blaine county schools and roads?

See Little Effect

DIRECT taxation is advocated on the grounds that it reminds the taxpayer what he is paying for his roads, schools and benefits. But certain tax specialists suspect that so much tax will inevitably remain hidden from the ultimate taxpayer that the effect of tipping him off on a few would be lost anyway.

Canning, pickling and preserving reach a climax in September, but even in October, the home canner may find on the market tomatoes, corn, cucumbers, peppers, onions, plums, pears, grapes, peaches, some melons and other fruits and vegetables that can be "put up" for winter.

The Empty House

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I THINK," said Top Notch, the rooster, "I'll go over and take a look around the house that belonged to the Galumps—the one that belongs to us now."

"You're not ready for another feast, are you?" asked Willy Nilly.

"Oh no," said Top Notch. "I merely want to see if there are any odd bits of string that would do for my General Store, and see what I can detect.

"I'd like to be able to tell Christopher Columbus Crow a few things."

So Top Notch put his little walking stick under his wing and strutted over to the empty house.

He looked all around the grounds and picked up a seed here, and another there. He discovered some pieces of grain which he found very pleasant, too.

"I don't care about a feast," said Top Notch to himself, "but a bite here, and a taste there, never did any one any harm."

Then he started up to the front door of the Galumps' house. He kept telling himself that he must no longer call it that, now that it was Willy Nilly's.

"I think I will name it The Empty House," he said. "An empty house sounds full of interest and excitement and mystery even if it hasn't chairs and tables and such things in it."

But as he walked up the steps he thought he heard some sounds from within.

He listened again. He was not sure whether he heard sounds now or not. Perhaps it would be well to jump to a window sill and look in.

So he did this, but as he peered through the window pane a sight greeted him that made him lose his balance and fall over backward in fear and dread.

Trained Leaders Held to Be Church's Outstanding Need

The ladies of the First Reformed Church had made very complete preparations and had a fine chicken dinner ready for a good sized crowd at the leadership training banquet, part of the program of the Council of Churches convention, scheduled for 6 o'clock Friday night. They found themselves, however, facing the same condition that was met by the ladies of the other churches who had prepared dinners or luncheons for the convention delegates—an attendance of less than half of what had been expected.

After the dinner, the Rev. T. Basil Young of Albany, program director of the State Council, spoke briefly on the radical changes that had been made in the leadership training program during the past five or six years. He said that the old curriculum had been scrapped and a new one consisting of four courses prepared—that is the first two series are ready and the third and fourth will come later. He introduced the Rev. Harry C. Munro of Chicago, director of adult work in the International Council, who further discussed leadership training work, but was forced to talk briefly because of lack of time.

Dr. Hunro declared that leadership training was the basic need today—that the central task of the church was the developing of qualified leadership. Said he, "Jesus gave first place to leadership; he appointed 12 men, the first leadership group. This training to carry on His work was the central thing in His ministry." The speaker said that leadership was basic "because it is about the only way we can improve." He found that much attention had been given to developing fine church plants, to increasing attendance, etc., but found comparatively little actual gain. "It is a question," he said, "whether we are returning to the Lord a reasonable return on the money he has entrusted to our keeping." He thought that much greater results would have been obtained in many cases had more modest buildings been erected and a portion of the money expended placed into a fund for the furtherance of leadership training. "Religious education, the giving to life a religious interpretation, is the most difficult task the church has to face," said the speaker. He found no substitute for good leadership, adding "The basic problem is not a better curriculum, nor better training methods, but an adult church membership with a motivation to do the work and supply the need." As to motivation, he quoted Paul, "We are working together with God" and said "That is the highest relationship known to man."

In closing, Dr. Munro said that while churches were extending more recognition to teachers, members of the various boards were still rated a little higher, although, in the speaker's estimation, "The Christian teacher stands higher than any officer in the church."

Church Council Convention Here

nificant degree to be motivated "as" Christ. The thing which everyone seemed to be seeking was a method or technique by which men become Christ-motivated. Dr. Peale pointed out the fallacy of prescribing a universal mould, or a single method by which men can become Christ-motivated. Involved in all the discussion was the agreement that a complete surrender, to all one can understand Christ to be the revelation of God and God's will for men, is essential to the receipt of power from on high. A very definite emphasis was that only when men by faith begin to act as they believe Christ would have them act, do they receive power to do on.

Discussing "The child's approach to religion in the children's division," it was pointed out that we often make the mistake of trying to teach children through adult religious experience, whereas religion can only be real to a child when it is related to his own first-hand experiences. We should see to it that the child has experiences through which he can understand God. Children should be made to feel that the church and religion are normal and happy parts of their lives.

Neglected Group.

In the intermediate group emphasis was laid upon the fact that too often this group is the most neglected in our church schools, whereas, since these children are as such an important stage in their religious development, the time when they should decide for Christ, that they should have carefully graded lessons to suit their exact needs, the best equipment available, teachers who are not only devoted but also trained in the psychology of early adolescence, and that classes should be conducted within as narrow an age group as is possible. A Parent-Teacher council is highly recommended for this age group, to help both the church school and the home in solving the difficult problems of this transition age. Here is where a wise teacher will discover pupils who will themselves develop into good teachers, and give to those pupils encouragement to attend teacher training classes and leadership schools.

In the Senior and Young Peoples' group, it was felt that while organization, materials and methods are important, more important is the friendly teacher with Christian character and understanding. The task in this department is to help young people, with their every-day problems; to get an intelligent view of the Christian faith and way of life; to get the power of God; to face the social issues of the day. In relation to this last the task is to make young people aware of these issues, to make them care about their solution, and to guide them in the first steps toward solving them.

Changing World

In the adult group attention was called to the changing world in which we live as indicated in the changing status of women, the home, means of entertainment, the scientific outlook, the approach to the Bible, the questioning of the authoritarian note, and our economic confusion. It was pointed out that capitalism and Protestantism grew up together, and that if capitalism is failing to meet the neds of men the church has a responsibility to be the salt or the leaven in sweetening or transforming it until it, or another system meets the needs of humanity. The adult program of the church which is still quite confused should concern itself with the question of preserving democracy and free speech, of facing needed changes in our social order. In our churches an emphasis in the teaching realm should be put on the "lost generation" between 20 and 40 years of age.

In the group dealing with "The Church seeking to serve the economically handicapped" the following were listed as economically handicapped: Unemployed, underpaid, laboring children, the careless, seasonal workers, migrant workers, new Americans, racial minorities, tenant farmers, and believe it or not, some people of wealth, for it is definitely possible to find a superabundance of things a handicap. It is surprising how much people who are economically handicapped endure and even enjoy. The Christian ideal for all men, however, is the abundant life. We must face this problem both in terms of the needs of individuals and in terms of the system which causes these conditions. Christianity is not a way of escape through resignation to difficulties, but a driving power for their solution. Many methods and techniques are being offered for the solution of these problems. The church has a business in them, guiding toward Christian solutions by Christian means in a Christian spirit.

As the church seeks to serve the politically and socially handicapped, the group dealing with this subject raised the following questions: Who are they? Why should the church care for them? How can the church help them?, and what are the evils of our present set-up? The group concluded that it is the business of the church to conciliate the prophetic and conservative elements of the church, that both be not destroyed; to work with and for people, both on the present system and toward a better one. It was felt that it is unwise strategy for any church to identify itself with any one political party or economic system.

The group dealing with the church seeking to serve the physically and mentally handicapped concluded that the minister and the church has a real obligation in connection with these people. Friendly advice and guidance to use the best available means for the correction of physical difficulties, along with the creation of attitudes of hopefulness in the minds of those who are suffering either physically or mentally, is a duty and a privilege of the pastor and the church. Suggested avenues of helpfulness are, seeking to guide people into an abiding faith in God in who they may completely trust; the setting up of a technique of worship through study, meditation and prayer; which translates itself into action and service thus making real their religious experience, as sharing the character of God.

In seeking to serve the spiritually and morally handicapped the church has an opportunity to proceed with a varied program of evangelism which will bring to bear upon the needs of weak and helpless humanity not only a sense of shortcoming and sin, but will offer to humanity both the hope and the power of godliness. Many methods may and ought to be used to offer to the needy children and men a satisfactory relationship to God and his universe, that by being "all things to all men" we may save some.

On motion of Mr. McGrath the report was adopted by the convention

Resolutions Committee

The Rev. B. Russell Branson next presented the report of the committee on resolutions, which was on vote adopted. The committee expressed its gratitude to the State Council for planning the convention and for the arrangements that had made it such a success; Dr. Peale for his inspiring addresses; the noted leaders present for their work and cooperation; the pastors and members of St. James and the other churches for their help and generous contribution of the use of their church buildings; the ladies of the various churches for the splendid luncheons and dinners served.

An Outstanding Program

Dr. Clemens said that the convention program had been an outstanding one, marked by the presence of the best leaders in their respective fields that the nation could produce. He said that they had been treated royally while in Kingston and his only wish was that there could have been a larger attendance on the part of delegates

After Miss Helen Bates, of Hurley, representing the Ulster County Youth Council, had conducted a brief worship service of scripture reading and prayer, the Rev. Dr. Peale was presented for the concluding address of the convention.

Dr. Peale's Address

Dr. Peale's concluding address, his topic being "Follow Me," was a fitting sequel to those he had given at the morning and afternoon sessions and an appropriate closing for the work of the convention. It was a fervent appeal for the "surrendered life," something, said he, which was of vital importance and without which he did not believe people could enjoy the power which was within their reach as Christians.

In discussing the meaning of the "surrendered life" the speaker said that two things were necessary—to take something, or some things out; to put in faith. In some cases it was a gross sin that had to be removed, but in more instances the things that hindered were lesser shortcomings. "I believe," said Dr. Peale, "that we are all segmented Christians, perhaps nine-tenths right." He gave several illustrations of what he meant by a segmented Christian, one of them being a reference to a certain merchant, a member of the church and commendable in many ways, but a hard business man, a driver, a man who cut the corners and whose treatment of those in his employ had undoubtedly been responsible in at least two cases of girls being tempted to go astray.

The convention closed with the benediction pronounced by the Rev Dr. Frank B. Seeley of the Fair Street Reformed Church.

Attendance Disappointing

General comment is that the convention was a great success, with a comprehensive and worth while program and speakers and leaders that were outstanding, the only disappointment being the attendance of delegates from the churches of the six counties in the district. There were a little less than 150 delegates in all registered and a large share of these came from Ulster county. This condition is believed to have resulted from the fact that the program being offered was not given the publicity in the other counties that it received in Ulster county. This unexpected falling off in attendance was especially unfortunate in its bearing upon the luncheons and dinners which had been provided by the ladied of the various churches. In every case very excellent dinners had been prepared for at least two or three times as many people as came, while the ladies had gone to great pains to make dining halls and tables attractive and to be on hand and ready to serve the expected guests promptly and efficiently.

Double Action in Milk Rebates

An action brought by Samuel Griff against Crowley Milk Company and an action brought by the Crowley Milk Company against Samuel Griff of Sullivan county, came up before Justice Schirick Friday at special term in a sort of double barreled action. Mr. Griff, who has been agent for the milk company in Sullivan county, brings an action in Sullivan county to recover a 10 per cent rebate from the company on the gross sales mad by him and he claims that the company denies that he has a right to recover this rebate as it is illegal to make any special rebates under the law.

Mr. Griff, however, brings his action and alleges that such a rebate is legal and was promised him.

The action brought by the Crowley Milk Company against Mr. Griff is brought in Broome county and the action is to recover a balance of some $3,600 which plaintiff claims is due from Mr Griff.

Griff asks that the Broome county action be moved to Sullivan county for trial and alleges that if this is done it can be tried and the two actions disposed of at this time. Counsel for the company opposed the motion and stated that the Broome county action can be tried immediately in that county while if brought to Sullivan county it would have to wait its turn. Griff seeks to have both actions disposed of but desired his own action tried at this time.

Justice Schirick gave counsel an opportunity to serve a supplemental reply. Decision reserved.

Opposition to Alimony Motion

A motion for temporary alimony and counsel fees pending trial of an action for divorce was argued Friday before Justice Schirick in supreme court. Application was made by Grace Griffin of Pine Hill for alimony and counsel fees in an action for divorce brought against her husband, Ward R. Griffin. George Speenburg appeared for Mrs. Griffin and Roscoe V. Elsworth for the defendant, who opposed the application.

Plaintiff asked that the court allow alimony and also fix the amount of counsel fees.

In opposition to the motion Mr. Elsworth told the court that the plaintiff was financially in excellent shape and should not receive alimony or counsel fees from the defendant because she was now in possession of property in Pine Hill to the value of $6,000 or more and which was the property of the defendant. He said not only did she have possession of a house in which she resided but also was in possession of a two family house which defendant had acquired from his aunt and to which the plaintiff had later taken title. He said the plaintiff had an income and he told the court that the whole matter was prompted by enmity of the father and son over opposition of the father to the son's marriage. He said the father had been ousted from his home because the father opposed the marriage and since then the son and his bride has taken up their residence in the house. That the plaintiff did not need financial assistance from the father, counsel said, was shown by the fact that the son and his mother had recently purchased an automobile.

An affidavit by the son in the divorce matter, Mr. Elsworth said was prompted by the dislike of the son toward his father.

Mr. Speenburg told the court that plaintiff's financial position had been carefully investigated and he was assured she had no income from the property which she holds and he urged the court to grant the application for alimony and also make an allowance for counsel fees.

Justice Schirick took papers and reserved decision.

Church Women Are Told to Organize in Council Luncheon

As a part of the Council of Churches and Religious Education now being held in the Protestant churches of the city, a luncheon for women took place at noon on Friday in the diningh all of the St. James M. E. Church, the chairman being Mrs. Harry P. Van Wagenen. Some women were present and were served a delicious and ample luncheon by the ladies of the church. The blessing was asked by Mrs. Oudemool.

Following the luncheon the group adjourned to meet directly in the church parlor. Both addresses made there were potential with epoch-making possibilities for real Christianty with power quite out of proportion to the size of the gathering.

Mrs. Van Wagenen introduced the two speakers, telling the following facts about each of them. Mrs. John Ferguson was for five years president of the council of women for home missions and was the first president of the National Council of Federated Church Women. She is the only woman ever to serve as an officer of the administrative committee of the Federal Council of Churches. Mrs. Ferguson was also, for 11 years, head of the Chatauqua committees. She now represents the women of the National Radio committee.

Mrs. Jesse Bader is the wife of the secretary of Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches and is vice-president of the National Council of Federated Church Women.

Mrs. Ferguson reminded the women of the local interdenominational groups of women which for eight years have been accomplishing great things, and then gave a brief account of the history of the movement. At a conference at Buffalo some 27 years ago there had been received some two or three hundred letters from church women asking that there be created an organization of interdenominational church women.

Those letters came from New England groups, middle-west groups and others, expressing the wish to have some connection with each other so that the woman-power of the land, particularly the Protestant woman-power might present a united front for Christianity.

Again and again efforts were made to bring about this desired end and at the various conferences held in Pittsburgh and later in Cleveland many things were learned, among them being that already the womanhood of the land was over-organized. Another such meeting was held in St. Louis and a fourth in Buffalo as it became more and more apparent what a power for the furtherance of Christianity, the support of Christ and His kingdom there would be in a united front of Protestant women.

Commission Organized

At the Buffalo meeting a National Commission of Protestant Church Women was organized with Mrs. Ferguson as the president, and an office was put into operation at 1123 Broadway, New York city, and little by little the movement grew. Finally on a national hook-up 25 minutes were allowed for the presenting the matter to Protestant church women of the country and hundreds of letters came pouring in showing how interested the women of the Protestant churches were. At the same time it was found that women were strongly united for almost every other interest than that of the Christian religion, except the Young Women's Christian Association which was outstanding.

In the meantime the knowledge was growing that already the Catholic women and the Jewish women were already presenting, each a united front in the interest of religion. One of the finest addresses that she had ever heard, Mrs. Ferguson said she heard recently by the president of the National Council of Jewish Women. All this time the interest in and demand for a federated council of the Protestant women of the nation was growing stronger and stronger. Then came a series of circumstances that put a quietus on the movement for the time being and which has not yet been overcome. With the depression and limited finances when much more money was needed to make known the program of the movement for a National Council of Federated Church Women the movement was terribly slowed down, and finally the leadership in the united Christian woman movement passed into the hands of other organizations having the funds and the machinery to carry on, among them being the Catholic National Council of Women, the Jewish National Council of Women, the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the Young Women's Christian Association, thus robbing the women, especially the young women with their forward look of their Protestant Women's organization with the power it could exert. There could be only one way, according to Mrs. Ferguson, to remedy the situation and gather together the mighty force and power of the Protestant womanhood of the land, and that would be for each group, each small group like the one she was addressing, urging upon the Council of Federated Churches to help them to become the vast Christian group that they might in this land of theirs, for the sake of returning Christianity to its place in national life.

Following Mrs. Ferguson's address that brought such illumination on so tremendously important a matter before them all, Mr. Hawksley sang for them, accompanied by Mrs. Hawksley, "The Lord is My Strength."

There was but little time for Mrs. Bader to speak, but that little time was made prenant with utterances that could revolutionize the entire situation for Christianity—"Jesus Christ in Our Land"—if followed out.

Offers a Reason.

Attending a meeting of the Federal Council of Church Women, Mrs. Bader said her hostess overheard a wealthy man say that he thought that the falling off of religion in our American homes was due to the women of the land. When they began their homes simply and the women had the time to look after the Christian teaching of the children and Christian living in the homes, things went much better. As the men gained more and more money the women became ambitious, wanted to move into larger homes, even estates, where more servants were needed and gradually the up-bringing of the children was handed over to these servants. Eventually the Christian life the homes faded out. Where the women exerted the power of their Christian lives in their homes the entire community was raised to a different level.

Mrs. Bader begged of the women to consider the chaos of the nation in this glorious age when all should be giving thanks they they might have a part to do in bringing the life and power of Jesus Christ to the front.

Having met recently with a group of men in Washington, to consider the financial and money situation and its influence on the country, Mrs. Bader said that throughout the entire most serious discussion, one man in the group was silent. Finally asked what his opinion was, he went to his desk and taking out a Bible read Second Chronicles, VII Chapter and 14th verse: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and will heal their land."

"That," said this man, "is God's message and the only message for the world today."

President Will Rest for Three Days

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt today prescribed three days of rest for himself to prepare for his first re-election campaign invasion of the west—starting from Washington the latter part of next week.

His next speeches are expected to cover such topics as agriculture, reciprocal tariffs and labor, but not necessarily in that order. He is still thinking of going as far west as Denver on the first of at least two forays into the west.

In the nine speeches and rear platform talks he had made in four eastern states since starting his personal campaign last Tuesday, the President has covered Communism, conservation, budget-balancing, relief, banking, and social security. Some of these subjects, however, he touched only incidentally and he probably will give them more prominence in talks to come.

Registration Days For Voters Soon

Voters when registering may also enroll, in the parties of their choice.

Outside of Kingston in Ulster county there will be but two days of registration, October 10 and 17.

Third Game Of Series Underway

out how I am when I get in there."

Bill Terry, still slightly dazed, looked the grounds over approvingly.

"This park is good for us," he said. "A big park is always best for a team that has the best pitchers.

Even standing room in the bleachers was disposed of by 11.45 when the gates were closed and sales stopped. The unreserved grandstand sections, at $3.30 each, were about three-quarters filled at that time. The crowd was still moving steadily through the gates and there was every indication of a sellout, and a capacity crowd of close to 70,000 for the first time in World Series history.

Giants Taunted.

Taunts of the Yankee rooters, that the Giants probably wouldn't show up at all today, were dispelled a half hour before noon when the National Leaguers poked tentative heads out of their dugout. They did not throw their caps into the park to see if it was safe to come in. But the roar of the boos from the bleachers sent most of the Terrymen back into seclusion again until the Yanks had whipped through their batting drill.

The American League champions, warming to their work in growing excitement of the crowded stands, the constant cheering, the tireless enthusiasm of the brass band, slugged their batting practice pitchers unmercifully. Every ball that fell into the stands—and they were flying in there like hailstones in a storm—brought a roar of approval from the hundreds who wrestled each other for the souvenirs.

The Giants took over the field for hitting practice shortly after noon. They wore their dark gray "travelling" uniforms, with blue caps. It was the Yanks' turn to sport the white flannels of the home team.

Jake Powell, fleet left fielder, limped slightly from a strained right ankle he injured sliding into second yesterday. The ankle was taped and he insisted that he was all right to play. The only shift in batting orders was the insertion of Jimmy Ripple into the Giant batting in fifth place, replacing Hank Leiber in center field. Ripple looks at all right handed pitching, Leiber at southpaws.

The Lineups

There was a prolonged conference between the umpires and captains after the band played the National Anthem. The principal ground rule provided that any fair ball bouncing into the stands would be limited to two bases.

The lineups:

Giants—Moore, lf; Bartell, ss; Terry, 1b; Ott, rf; Ripple, cf; Mancuso, c; Whitehead, 2b; Jackson, 3b; Fitzsimmons, p.

Yankees—Crosetti, ss; Rolfe, 3b; DiMaggio, cf; Gehrig, 1b; Dickey, c; Selkirk, rf; Powell, lf; Lazzeri, 2b; Hadley, p.

First Inning

Moore, leading off, hit the third pitch past Rolfe for a single. The Yankee third baseman dived for the ball but missed.

Bartell sacrificed on the first pitch, Hadley to Gehrig, as Moore ran to second.

Terry dropped a single in center but Moore was prevented from trying to score by DiMaggio's fast fielding.

Ott hit into a double play, Crosetti taking his hopper near second base, stepping on the bag and tossing to Gehrig to complete the double killing.

No runs, two hits, no errors, one left.

Crosetti, opening for the Yanks, lifted a short fly to Ott.

Rolfe ran the count to three and two, then grounded out to Terry, unassisted.

DiMaggio popped to Whitehead.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

JUDGE SCHIRICK HEARS DIVORCE CASE

A divorce action brought by George Buschbaum against Margaret S. Buschbaum was tried in supreme court Friday before Justice Harry E. Schirick. William B. Duggan of Poughkeepsie appeared for the plaintiff. Testimony was that the parties were married at Whitefield, L. I., on September 12, 1922. The action is brought on statutory grounds and the complaint alleges the acts took place in 1934 "in and about Kingston" and at New Salem in the town of Esopus.

Generally speaking, we have more faith in mountain-climbers than in authors; but what about the British explorer in India who tells of finding "a horizontal oasis in a vertical desert"?

What most of us hope to have when the next depression hits us is a stabilization fund.

SMITH HECKLER OUSTED BY POLICEMEN

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith ran into some differences of opinion in his address at Carnegie Hall in which he announced his support of Alfred M. Landon. One heckler in the audience "took a walk" without causing more than momentary disturbance. Another heckler, however was snagged by police and given a rush from the hall. Above, the New Deal supporter may be seen emerging with his police "escort." (Associated Press Photo)

Yanks Win 2nd Series Game 18-4, Battle Moves to Their Own Stadium

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—With the issue more sharply defined as strictly a battle between Carl Hubbell's pitching perfection and the Yankees' record-breaking ball-killing, the big town's exclusive World Series warfare moved across the Harlem river today for a three-day run at Yankee Stadium.

Unless fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, who serves 'em up for the Giants in the third game today, can duplicate Hubbell's Wednesday victory over the Yanks, the National League champions had better pray for the rain that aided them immeasurably in the opener.

Win or lose in the series, however, the Yankees, as a direct result of their tremendous clouting barrage in yesterday's weird 18-4 triumph, on top of their amazing feats in the American League season, undoubtedly will go down in the books as the greatest set of record-breaking sluggers ever put together.

TONY LAZZERI

Sparked by "Poosh 'em Up" Tony Lazzeri's homer with the bases loaded in the third—the first four-run homer since Elmer Smith unloaded the bases for the Indians 16 years ago, and the second in all series history—Lou Gehrig and Company helped smash or duplicate a dozen World Series hitting and scoring records into oblivion in compiling their astonishing total off five Giant pitchers, to even the New York civil war affair at one game apiece.

Crowd Falls Short

President Roosevelt and 43,542 other fans turned out for the battle, but the crowd again disappointed, falling short of the 52,000 capacity expected.

Monte Pearson, Yankee number two right hander, may be sufficiently recovered from his ailing back to pitch Sunday's game against Hubbell. That would leave big Red Ruffing for Monday's clash.

McCarthy unexpectedly nominated big Bump Hadley over the veteran Pat Malone or the steady Johnny Murphy to oppose Fitzsimmons' knuckle-balling.

Neither Fitz nor Hadley probably will produce today the daffy baseball served up by Lefty Gomez, who lived up to his "goofy" nickname, and "Prince Hal" Schumacher and the four pitchers who followed him to the mound for the Giants.

In all series history, there probably was never a dizzier affair, not even excluding the 1929 game in which the Athletics shoved ten runs across in one inning against the Cubs.

Giants Strong in 4th.

The Giants' staged their biggest scoring splurge of the day in the fourth producing three runs. The only other Giant run was the result of two walks and Gomez's wild pitch in the second.

However, on most occasions when he was in danger, the Castilian smoked over his fireball in form, fanning a total of eight batters during the game. He allowed the Giants six hits.

The Yankees, meantime, found "Prince Hal" Schumacher and his four hurling co-workers particularly simple.

Schumacher's famed "sinker ball," was easy for the homicide squad. They shoved two runs over on him in the first, when Gehrig and Dickey each flied to send a man across the plate, after Frank Crosetti and Joe DiMaggio singled and Red Rolfe walked.

Schumacher managed to stagger through the second—then came the deluge. The Yankees started their record breaking splurge in that seven-run frame, belting three pitchers around, and didn't finish it up until they put on a grand six-run finale in the ninth.

Four Pitchers

The Yanks' total of 18 runs off Schumacher, Lefty Al Smith, Dick Coffman, Gabbo (The Great) Gabler and Harry Gumbert set a new all-time series high for scoring in a game, far outclassing the previous top of 13. All of the hurlers were driven in by batters, creating a new mark in that division. The winning margin of 14 runs completely overshadowed the previous best of 11 by which the Athletics walloped the Giants 25 years ago.

Lazzeri's homer into the right field tier came in the big second, and, with his fly scoring Dickey in the seventh, gave him a total of five runs batted in for a new all-time, one-game, series high. Dickey equalled this before the game ended, driving in a run with a fly in the first, another with a single in the third, and three with his round-trip clout into the upper deck in the ninth. Both surpassed the previous mark of four held by nine players, including Babe Ruth and Lazzeri, himself.

Lazzeri also equalled Elmer Smith's performance against Brooklyn in the 1920 series with a homer with the bases loaded, which tied him up with the Cleveland outfielder at four-all in runs batted in by one player in one inning.

Frank Crosetti deadlocked Babe Ruth and Earle Combs in the series record books by scoring four times in one game. Joe DiMaggio made all three putouts in the ninth inning, a performance recorded previously only by Mel Ott and Ernie Orsatti.

The total of 22 runs for both teams was three over the 19 the Yanks and Cubs piled up exactly four years ago; the six runs by the Yanks in the ninth was the heaviest final-inning scoring in series history; the official time of two hours, 49 minutes made it the longest game of them all; and, every Yank got at least one hit and counted one run, something never before done.

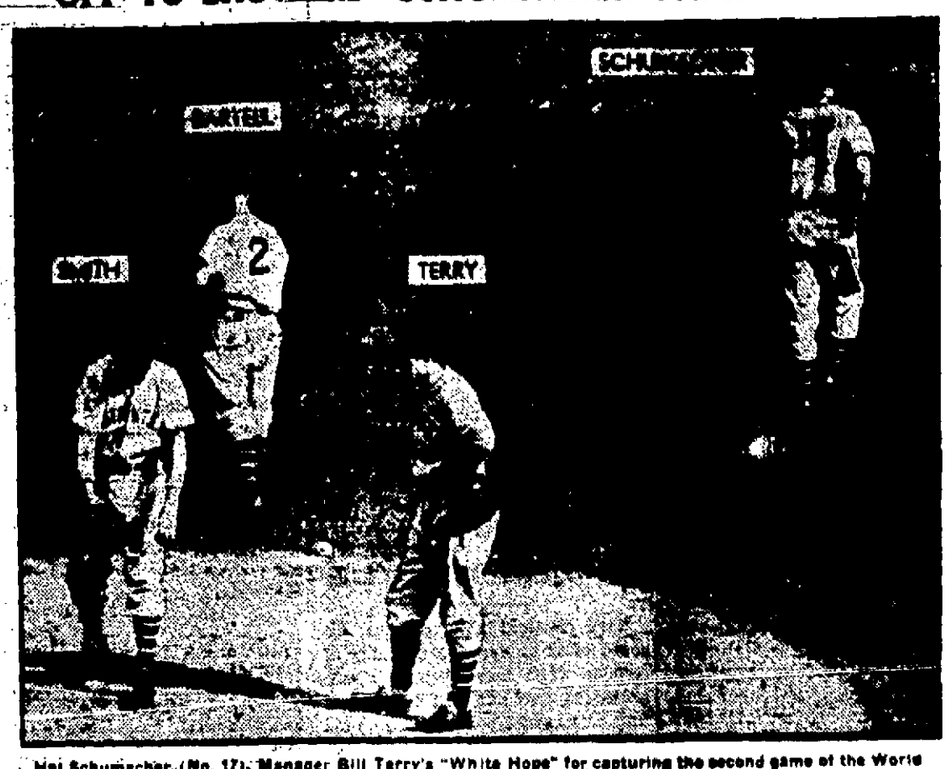
WRESTLING LAST NIGHT.

(By The Associated Press)

North Bergen, N. J.—Able Coleman, 205, New York, pinned Rudy Dusek, 218, Omaha, (one fall).

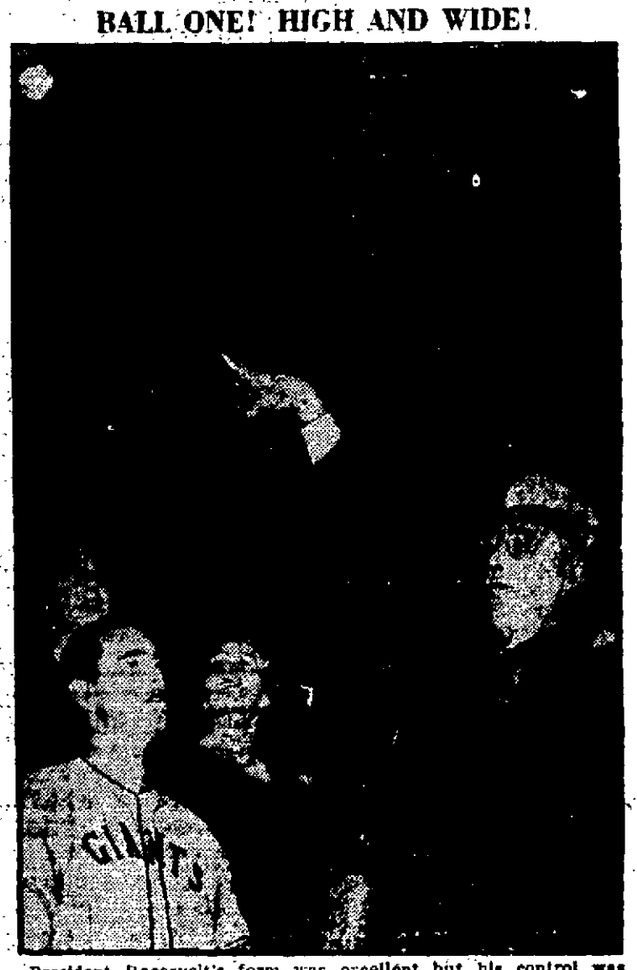
Waterbury, Conn.—Hans Schneider, 212, Germany, defeated Ray Boswell, 220, Philadelphia. (Two out of three falls).

OFF TO SHOWERS—SCHUMACHER YANK VICTIM



Hal Schumacher (No. 17), Manager Bill Terry's "White Hope" for capturing the second game of the World Series, went trundling off to the showers in the third inning under a terrific barrage from Joe McCarthy's "Murderers' Row." It was Terry's sad duty to bring in Al Smith from the bull pen—but only briefly, as Smith promptly retired in favor of Dick Coffman. Dick Bartell joined in the sad parting of Schumacher but apparently couldn't bear to watch Smith warm up. (Associated Press Photo)

BALL ONE! HIGH AND WIDE!



President Roosevelt's form was excellent but his control was not everything to be desired when he tossed out the ball (upper left hand corner) in the second World Series game at the Polo Grounds. Apparently it satisfied Manager Bill Terry, the President's daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger and the President's son, John. (Associated Press Photo)

Church Basketball League This Year

Jansen Fowler, president of the Church Basketball League, announced today that the league will hold its first meeting Monday night at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock. All captains and managers of the teams participating last year, as well as any new teams desirous of joining the league, are requested to attend.

After inactivity for a few years, the Church League functioned again last year and enjoyed a highly successful season. Seven teams were represented with the Port Ewen five winning the championship. Other teams entered were Redeemer, Clinton Avenue, Presbyterian, Trinity, First Dutch and Comforter.

Plans are underway for another good season. All the above teams are expected to enter again, and possibly one or two new teams.

Kingston High at Liberty Gridiron For 1st Game Today

Coach G. Warren Klas and his Kingston High School football varsity left the school early today for the Maroon's first contest of the season against Liberty High School at the summer resort community.

Accompanied by a pack of loyal rooters, the following gridders made the trip:

Ends: "Gal" Studer, Nyulassy, Gliday, Lane.

Tackles: Voight, Von Essen, Decker, Kenny.

Guards: Tenedini, Delanoy, Powers, Friedman.

Centers: Rifenbary, Bill Studer.

Backs: Capt. Don Murphy, Tommy Maines, Harry Wilbur, Vince Stoll, Ray Schneider, Bill Meagher, Jack Holstein, Jim Ashdown, Jry Rose.

The probable starting lineup of the locals averages approximately 174 pounds in the front wall and 162 in the backfield. This is somewhat lighter than last year's squad with such behemoth tackles as "Heavy" Howser and Larry Glennon, now performing in collegiate fields. "Hippo" Decker, alternate tackle, is the heaviest candidate, making the scales yell for mercy in the neighborhood of 200.

The probable starting lineups:

LE	Nyulassy	Hamel
LT	Voight	Bedenbaugh
LG	Tenedini	DeMoya
C	Rifenbary	Yeager
RG	Delanoy	Berg
RT	Von Essen	Kaplan
RE	Studer	Clark
QB	(Capt.) Murphy	S. Hurwitz
LHB	Wilbur	(Capt.) L. Hurwitz
RHB	Maines	Hurley
FB	Stoll	Mendelsohn

Liberty subs: Schoonmaker, Samodel, Graham, Corey, Travis, Benson, Sherwood, Bant, Kilcoin and Benton.

Poughkeepsie 0, Albany High 26.

Port Jervis 0, James Ferris High (Jersey City) 13.

Middletown 14, Textile High (New York city) 0.

Stops Mrs. Hill

It's hard to keep a political campaign going during a World Series.

Al Flanagan, ex-star of the Yellow Jacket backfield, now booking games for the Brown's Servicenter-Richfield combination, attending the practice in the Municipal Auditorium, said that he expected at least four bus loads of fans to accompany the Dees to Newburgh Sunday for their opening game with the Recreations.

"An encouraging number of reservations have been made," said Flanagan, "but I hope more come in. We want to make that Newburgh trip well fortified as far as rooters are concerner, because Newburgh shouters are going to jam their big stadium, I've been told."

Anyone who hasn't made reservation for transportation, and intends to travel by bus, should 'phone Flanagan 900, or Brown's Servicenter 730, at the earliest possible. Busses are to leave the Servicenter at 12:30. The game is scheduled for 2:30.

Jerry Dann, former Ohio Wesleyan star, coach of the Brownies, has them in excellent physical shape for the game tomorrow and well fortified with tricky plays. "This is my first year as a coach," the rugged mentor of the Bees said, "and I want to make a good impression. Another reason for victory is because this Kingston game is the first of the season, and we want to start off on the right road."

Dann didn't have much time to talk, because he was giving all his attention to the Richfielders, who went through formations with vim and precision. "Look at those fellows work," exclaimed Gus Steigerwald, veteran Yellow Jacket trainer. "They are all working hard for Jerry Dann. He has them in better shape and working more plays than any coach we've ever had. I don't believe there's a semi-pro outfit in the Hudson valley comparable to this 1936 combination."

Dann's starting lineup probably will be as follows:

The Line.

Left guard, Jimmy Steelgerwald.
Center, Charlie Raible.
Right guard, Tiber Tomohaw.
Right tackle, J. "Moose" Tiano.
Right end, Jerry Dann.

The Backfield.

Right half, Eddie Burgevin.
Fullback, Bill Thomas.
Quarterback, "Jas" Cullum.

Utility: Ed Cherney, B. Whitely, Bill Vandersee, Marco Tiano and "Fitzer" Fitzgerald.

Coach Brubaker, of the Recreations, announced Friday that Newburgh's tentative starting lineup would include Flanagan and Thomas, ends; Gritman and Barker, tackles; Welsh and Van Woert, guards; Revell, center; Chumas, quarterback; McKinstrie and Agnew, halfbacks; Henry, fullback.

In Semi-Finals

Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., advanced to the semi-finals of the women's golf championship at Summit, N. J., by defeating Mrs. Carl H. Donner of Springfield, N. J., 5 and 4. (Associated Press Photo)

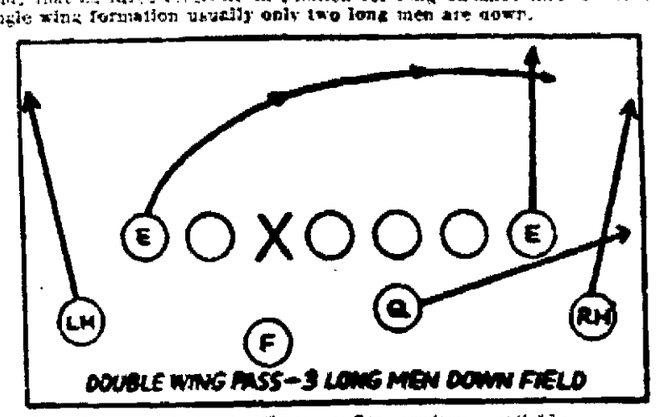
WINGBACKS

by TINY THORNHILL

(Eleventh in a series of 12 daily articles prepared by the coach of Stanford's Rose Bowl champions in collaboration with Russ Newland, Associated Press sports writer.)

While Stanford passes, started either from the single wing or double wing formations, may look pretty much the same to spectators there is considerable difference in the football technique.

From the double wingback setup we can get three long men down the field; that is, three receivers in position for long distance throws. In the single wing formation usually only two long men are down.



DOUBLE WING PASS—3 LONG MEN DOWN FIELD

In either case, however, there are five receivers available.

On the double wing pass, the fullback usually does the throwing. The left and right halfbacks and the right end go down for the long shots, the quarterback "spots" for a short whip to the right and the left end may cut over to the right side to a position somewhat longer than the quarterback.

There are many variations of this passing play from the same formation. All are good if they work.

(Tomorrow: Lateral pass from reverse.)

A Warning That Food Costs Will Go Higher

Washington, Oct. 3 (AP)—Smart shopping by the purchaser of the family's food supplies was advised by federal experts today, with a warning that food costs will go higher.

After a nationwide study the Consumer Guide, published at the Agriculture Department, said "careful buying will be necessary during the first half of 1937 when he full price raising effects of the drouth will be felt."

Retail food prices in recent weeks were said to have reached the "highest level since 1930" but the price study added that they were "still 29 per cent below" 1929, peak in recent years.

Judge Traver Sentences Four

Five criminal actions were disposed of in county court Friday afternoon when four defendants were sentenced and one had the imposition of sentence postponed.

County Judge Frederick G. Traver then adjourned the term until November 9 at 2 o'clock when criminal matters will be taken up by District Attorney Cleon B. Murray.

William Liscomb who was charged with carrying a dangerous weapon on September 13, last, was given a 30 day sentence in the county jail. Liscomb is the negro who became engaged in an argument with another lad on North street and alleges that his friend struck him in the face and that in retaliation Liscomb drew a razor and attempted to defend himself. In his defense, however, he missed his assailant and slashed a man who happened to be passing.

Everett Sampson of this city was given a six months' jail sentence on his plea of guilty to carrying a dangerous weapon on August 27, last, at Hickorybush. Sampson who lives on Abeel street, was charged with having threatened one Cassidy with a gun when Cassidy ordered Sampson from the Cassidy premises.

Robert Shirley of Marlborough, who was charged by indictment with forgery, second degree, on July 21, last, at Marlborough where it was alleged he drew a small check without having funds, changed a former plea of not guilty to forgery to one of guilty to petit larceny and was given 90 days in the county jail.

William Smith of Ellenville charged with burglary, third degree, for having entered the Harry Levine place there, was sentenced to Elmira State Reformatory.

Roy Lane of Boiceville who was charged with having entered the Bailey chicken coops and removed a few hens which were later sold to boarding house keepers in the vicinity, entered a plea of guilty to unlawful entry and Judge Traver suspended imposition of sentence and paroled the defendant to the custody of Probation Officer Robert Service.

District Attorney Cleon B. Murray announced that since he would be required to appear before the grand jury in attendance at the October trial term of supreme court which will convene Monday afternoon it would be necessary to postpone further criminal matters until after the October trial term of supreme court and consequently county court recessed until November 9.

Wants Particulars In Action Against Village of Walden

Application for a bill of particulars was opposed in supreme court Friday before Justice Harry E. Schirick in an action brought by Charles A. Sommer against the village of Walden. Ellsworth Baker appeared for the plaintiff and opposed the application on the grounds that many of the matters sought by the bill were not in the possession of the plaintiff. Judge Schirick took the papers and said he would decide the matter Friday because the case is on the calendar for trial in Orange county Monday when the term opens.

Mr. Sommer alleges he spent some $40,000 to construct a swimming pool, dance pavilion, restaurant and gas station near the village and that the village dumped sewage in the brook which ran near his place and caused such a nuisance as to drive away all business. He seeks damages from the village.

The action originally contained an application for a restraining injunction but since the action was commenced the village had changed its sewage disposal plant so as to eliminate the difficulty and the present action is only one for damages for the business which was los during the continuation of the alleged nuisance.

In 1927 Mr. Sommers erected his pool and amusement center and in 1931 the alleged nuisance came about and he alleges he lost $3,000 a year income from his pool and other damages which he now claims amounts to $20,000

The village admits that it did use the creek for sewage disposal but denies damages to Sommers, claiming that the creek had been used for a part of the sewage disposal plant of the village prior to the erection of pool and that therefore Mr. Sommer cannot collect because he erected his place with the knowledge that the village had prior use of the creek. Later the village built a sewage disposal plant and the nuisance no longer exists according to Mr. Sommers.

The action for damages was commenced in 1933 and is now on the calendar for trial in Orange county Monday. Mr. Baker asked the court to deny most of the items in the request for a bill on the grounds that they were facts which were not in the hands of the plaintiff and further on the grounds that the defendant had ample time to make application for a bill without waiting for the last moment before trial. He charged the application for the bill of particulars was to delay the trial of the action.

Lane Was Fined $50 For Drunken Driving

Wanted to Know In Advance What Sentence Would Be But Judge Culloton Told Him He Was There Not to Bargain But to Pass Sentence

"I'll plead guilty if you fine me instead of sending me to jail," said Ralph Lane, 37, of 472 Washington avenue, when arraigned before Judge Culloton in police court this morning. Lane was charged with driving a car while intoxicated on Taylor street early Friday morning.

"I am not making any bargain," replied the judge, "it is your privilege to fight the charge or you may change your former plea of not guilty to one of guilty just as you choose."

"If you fine me I'll plead guilty," said Lane.

"The only promise I'll make you," replied the judge, "is that I will sentence you at once."

Lane scratched his head thoughtfully.

"As you don't seem to be able to make up your mind," said Judge Culloton, "I'll adjourn the hearing to Monday morning to give you further time to decide what you want to do."

Then it was that Lane decided to plead guilty to drunken driving.

Judge Culloton imposed a fine of $50, and revoked Lane's operator's license. The judge also imposed a fine of $2 on the charge of driving a car with defective lights, to which charge Lane had pleaded guilty Friday.

Four In Front Seat

Ellsworth B. Willis of Brooklyn, was fined $2 for driving a car with four people riding in the front seat. This is a violation of the state law.

More Club Members

The Stop Sign Passers' Club is daily gathering new members. Jack Feldshuh of New York city, arrested for failing to observe one of the signs, forfeited $5 cash bail when he failed to appear in court. Peter Didzik of 177 Wall street, was fined $2. Julian Kawecki of Whiteport was fined $2.

Joseph Naccarrato, 15, of 61 Newkirk avenue, arrested on a charge of driving a car without having a driver's license, and also with having defective lights, was held for appearance later in children's court, owing to the fact that he was under 16 years of age.

Virgil Sampson, a negro of Abeel street, was sentenced to 10 days in jail for public intoxication on Broadway.

The new car models seem to be shaped more like pollywogs.

By Junius

There is only one car without a back seat driver, and that's a hearse.

Reporters and photographers were hanging about the hospital emergency room waiting for the victim of an accident to be patched up.

Nurse—What is so unusual about this accident?

Reporters and Photographers (in chorus)—He was knocked down and run over by a horse and buggy.

Regardless of the fact that motor cars and trains are continuing to run the races, the trains are still holding the percentage in their favor.

Jerry—I was hit hard by a taxi last week.

Geraldine—Oh, you poor dear! Were you hit by the bumper?

Jerry—No, by the meter.

Life's jolliest moment: When the wife who's been telling you how to drive for 14 years, comes home with her first traffic ticket.

Taxi Driver—What on earth are you growling about? You said you wanted to get to the hospital in a hurry, didn't you?

Passenger—Yes, I did. But I didn't say I wanted to stay there.

There may be a difference beween a fast automobile and a swift one, especially if it's fast in the mud... And sometimes very careful drivers lose control of their cars when they fail to meet the payments.

First Child—You've got the same daddy that you've always had, and I've had three so far.

Second Child—I guess mine ain't got any trade-in-value.

Short, short, short story: The automobile approached the corner at 80 miles an hour.

Motorists have a unique choice of destinations at a crossroads between Sykesville and Cramer, in Jefferson County, Penn. There a highway marker informs them that it is two miles to Paradise and eight miles to Panic. What's more, a side road leads to the nearby town of Desire.

Mrs. Vanere—There's the truck with the piano we bought today. You go tell the men to take it right back.

Mr. Vanere—Why? Have you changed your mind about buying it?

Mrs. Vanere—No; but what's the use of buying a $600 piano and having it delivered at night when the neighbors can't see it? Tell the men to bring it back in the morning.

Woman Driver—Can you fix this fender so my husband will never know I bent it?

Garage Mechanic—No, but I can fix it so that you can ask him in a few days how he bent it.

We never could understand why doctors always have their offices up a steep flight of stairs where sick patients can hardly climb. Why not try a cozy suite of rooms on the ground floor? Too little thought is given to sick or lame people's comfort.

Doctor—There goes the only woman I ever loved.

Nurse—Why don't you marry her?

Doctor—I can't afford to. She is my best patient.

A lot of men who pride themselves on "speaking their minds" never say very much.

Park Idler—I could have sworn I saw one of those statues move.

Nearby Policeman (snorting)—Them's not statues, they're city workers.

Adults are like an infant that bumps its head. The infant isn't hurt enough to howl if nobody sympathizes.

Jim—Why did you break your engagement with that schoolteacher?

Sam—I didn't show up one night and she wanted me to bring a written excuse from my mother.

First Doctor—Then we decide not to operate?

Second Doctor—Yes. What do you think we ought to charge him for deciding not to operate.

Mrs. Bragg—When we were in Egypt we visited the pyramids. Some of the stones were literally covered with hieroglyphics.

Mrs. Meek—I hope none of them got on you. They say some of those foreign insects are terrible.

The true cost of anything is the number of days of your life you give in exchange for it.

King—I understand Meeker's wife is an excellent authority on parliamentary law.

Kole—She ought to be. She's been speaker of the house since they got married fifteen years ago.

To borrow is human—to pay back is divine.

(The Mess Feature Syndicate, 805 Summit Avenue, Greensboro, N. C.)

The sea is now calm—there's no longer a gale.

"I see it," cries Puffy. "Look, there. It's a whale!"

"You're right," answers Johnny. "That surely is true—

"It's big! It could bite this small boat right in two!"

ATTRACTIONS

At The Theatres

PREVIEWED

Today.

Kingston: "Sing Baby Sing," a picture in which some of the silver screen's most popular stars, including Adolphe Menjou and Alice Faye "clown to town" in hi-de-ho fashion. These two are supported by such comedy stars as Ted Healey, Patsy Kelly, the Ritz Brothers and others. Also "March of Time" and amateur stage show, "Winners on Parade."

Broadway: "Swing Time," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Unlike their former offerings, the new picture has an intricately romantic story, with both stars pursuing the course of true love through the obstacles offered by a pair of rivals. Astaire is a cheerful gambler, seeking his fortune in Manhattan so he can go back to his home town and marry his childhood sweetheart; Miss Rogers is a dancing academy instructress who takes Astaire as a pupil, despite the glowering of an orchestra leader who intends to marry the luscious lady.

Complications come thick and fast, especially when Astaire's fiancee shows up to find out what he's doing, and the band leader makes frantic efforts to break up the growing romance between Astaire and Miss Rogers. All this is interwoven with some of the catchiest song numbers and dances the famous pair have yet presented and the hilarious counterplay of a new screen comedy team in the persons of Victor Moore and Helen Broderick—a combination that gives "Swing Time" top honors in originality and entertainment value.

Orpheum: "Meet Nero Wolfe," starring Edward Arnold as a portly cool witted criminologist, shows him living quietly among his orchids and beer kegs, solving murders as a hobby. Lionel Stander is seen in the leading supporting role as Nero Wolfe's chief aide and legman. Others in the cast are Victor Jory, Joan Perry, Nana Bryant, Russell Hardie, Dennie Moore and John Qualen. The film is based on the widely read novel by Rex Stout called "Fer de Lance," which was adapted to the screen by Bruce Manning and Howard J. Green. Briefly, it tells of the efforts of Wolfe to clear the shroud of mystery that surrounds the murder of Professor Barstow on the golf greens of a prominent country club. During Wolfe's investigations two others meet a similar fate. Forced to play a desperate trump card, Wolfe subtly challenges the murderer's ego and forces him to show his hand. The companion feature ,a western story, is "Lawless Nineties" with John Wayne as the star.

Tomorrow.

Knigston: Same, except amateurs.
Broadway: Same.
Orpheum: "Dracula's Daughter" and "Cattle Thief," starring Ken Maynard. The first named picture is a story of the 200 year old superstitions about vampires, which still persist in central Europe. The cinema shows the weird creature who hypnotizes humands and bends them to her desires Gloria Holden portrals the title role and Otto Kruger the scientist who endeavors to combat vampires. Marguerite Churchill provides the romantic element and Edward Van Sloan an important part in the firm, as does Irving Pichel, too.

Motion Picture to Prevent Fires

Through arrangements made by the Port Ewen Fire Department a motion picture, "The Bad Master", stressing fire prevention, will be shown at the Port Ewen Reformed Church Hall twice next week, once for children and the other time for adults.

The show for children will be held Tuesday starting at 7 p. m. and the one for adults on Wednesday, October 7, at 8 p. m A cordial invitation is extended to all by the firemen to see the film, produced to show some of the more common errors made in connection with the use of fire. A typical American family is depicted committing some of the common errors that result in heavy fire losses.

It is the contention of the Port Ewen firemen that the screening of the picture will be an appropriate event during Fire Prevention week, and that it will serve a useful purpose in pointing out how destructive fires may be avoided.

William Bush, 81, Findlay, O., is still active in his carpentry trade doing heavy work that many younger men would find difficult.

Joh Snook, 77, Findlay, O., farmer, lives within half a mile of his birthplace and has never been outside his state.

Police Lieutenant E. A. Smith Retires

Police Lieutenant Edwin A. Smith, formerly of Kingston, has retired from the New York city police department with a record of 25 years service. He was never late for duty once during his quarter of a century on the force.

Lieutenant Smith, always a lover of the outdoors, and a supporter of the "back to nature" theory, will leave the bright lights of the metropolis now for his farm in Hyde Park.

While he sits in the quiet of his new home, the ex-policeman will run over a wealth of memoirs dating back to May 29, 1911, when he started his career as a rookie cop. Lieutenant Smith has booked more than 45,000 prisoners during his time behind the police desk, and loaned carfare to more than 1,000 stranded people. Out of the whole lot, only 11 ever paid him back.

Prior to joining the New York department, Mr. Smith worked as a brakeman on the New York Central railroad, when he lived in Kingston.

Mrs. Spining Dead

Linesville, Pa., Oct. 3 (AP)—Mrs. George L. Spining, of Pasadena, Calif., widow of the late Rev. George L. Spining, known as "the friend of the Indian" half a century ago, died today. She would have been 86 on October 7. Mrs. Spining's husband won his name, "friend of the Indian," for long work in bettering conditions of Indian tribes after the Indian wars of 1865. He was in charge of supply trains for the government forces on the western plains and in the Rocky Mountains during the Indian War. Earlier he served with Co. C. 7th Kansas Cavalry in the Civil War.

New Boys' Clubs Started at "Y"

Friday evening a group of 120 boys gathered at the Y. M C. A. to hear about their club program for the coming year. Some of the boys have belonged to the Rotary Boys Club or the Schwenk Boys Club, which have been meeting at the "Y" for the past several years and which have demonstrated the value of such work. The other boys have been recruited from the playgrounds of the city and will be organized into similar groups Invitations will be issued to 80 more boys within the next couple of weeks making the total of 200 boys in these boys' clubs sponsored by organizations or groups of individuals.

The Rotary Boys' Club has as advisers, the Boys' Work Committee of the Kingston Rotary Club—Harry Edson, chairman; John Egan, Alfred Schmid, Gus Modjeska, Neland Fuller, Frederick Snyder, Emil Boessneck and James Loughran. This committee has carried on a very effective program with a group of 40 boys at the Y M. C. A. for the past four years.

The Schwenk Boys' Club will have as advisers John Schwenk, chairman; Paul Zucca, John Garon, Sam Peyer, James Murphy and Eugene Cornwell. Mr. Schwenk has always been interested in the boys' work program at the Y. M. C A. and for a number of years has actively sponsored a group of from 15 to 25 boys This year the group will be enlarged to approximately 50 boys and Mr. Schwenk has called in some of his aldermanic friends to assist him on the advisory committee and to help with the boys' club programs. Donald Moore, one of the popular city playground directors, will be the club leader of this group

Another group of boys organized last evening will be known as the Barmanns' Boys' Club, its personnel coming from the Barmanns' playground. Its club leader will be Bill Reardon, Jr., who was the playground director there, and the advisory committee will be made up of a group of policemen who are interested in the boys. The committee is William Reardon, chairman; Peter Keresman, Howard Kinch, Fred Stoudt and Winfield Entrott.

There will be two other groups of 40 boys each organized soon, one of the groups having as an advisory committee the boys' work committee of the Kingston Lions Club; the other club will have as sponsors, a group of younger lawyers of the city. On this advisory committee which was present at last night's meeting are: Jansen Fowler, chairman; Dorr Monroe, Vincent Connelly and Abram Streifer.

Last night's meeting was a real enthusiastic gathering with the boys quite excited over their new "Y" memberships and the possibilities that lay ahead. Paul Zucca as song leader, with Danny Bittner at the piano certainly had the boys singing and the boys appreciated this service by responding with three lusty cheers at the conclusion of the songs.

Following the song period, N. H. Fuller, Boys' Work Secretary at the "Y" to whom will fall the job of coordinating this Boys' Club program with the regular "Y" schedule, explained to the boys the purpose of the meeting and the time they were supposed to come to the regular club meeting. Mr. Fuller paid high tribute to Harry Edson, chairman of the Rotary Boys' Work Committee, under whose leadership such a fine work has been carried on with the Rotary Boys' Club. Due very largely to his efforts and vision the work is now being extended to cover 200 boys. Mr. Edson is chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Recreation and during the past summer he conceived the idea of carrying on in these "Y" groups the work begun on the city's playgrounds.

Another feature of last night's meeting was the presentation of gold medals to 10 Rotary boys who were members of the Rangers one of five teams in the Rotary Boys' Club last year and who won the all year competition. Members of this team were: Ferrell McElrath, captain; Alfred Mayone, William Ball, Herbert Williams, James Divine, Leo Krenglosky, Clayton Stalter, Albert White, Russell Roosa and Joe Carchidi. The presentations were made by John Schwenk who spoke of the value of this type of work and of how much he enjoyed the work with his own boys' club.

A typical meeting for these boys clubs will consist of an hour's gym period, a half hour in the showers and pool and a club meeting. Supervisors of the program at the "Y" will be Mr. Fuller, boys' secretary, and Mr. Henke, physical director, and they will be assisted by the advisory committees and the club leaders. The club leaders are: Donald Moore, William Reardon, Jr., Robert Dulin, Sidney Lutzin and Robert Van Valkenburgh. Most of these boys are students at New Paltz Normal and have been popular playground directors. They are generously volunteering their time for this new work.

Memberships in the "Y" for the 200 boys are made available by the Kingston Rotary Club, John Schwenk and a number of other interested citizens of the city. The new program will cramp the facilities of the boys' department a bit but there are other rooms that can be fixed up and anyone having suitable furniture, games or boys' books and magazines which they would care to donate to this cause are asked to call the Y. M. C. A.

Peace League States Its Case

O. Mr Hayes was elected one of the vice presidents of the American League as was Jacob Mirsky, president of the Brick Layers Local 37 of New York city.

Among others who took an active part in the Congress were Otto Brach, secretary of the Central Labor Union of Toledo, Ohio; Clarence Irwin, a leader of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers Union, and John Bartee, of the South Bend, Indiana, Central Labor Union.

On various occasions other labor leaders of the A. F. of L. have addressed American League meetings In April, 1935, Francis Gorman, leader of the United Textile Workers, addressed a huge American League mass meeting at Madison Square Garden in New York city. In the Spring of 1936, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America spoke at a dinner in New York city sponsored by the Barbusse Memorial committee for the benefit of the American League. His address was later printed in the League monthly magazine "The Fight" A F. Whitney, president of the Grand Lodge Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen issued the following statement in regard to the American League:

"I recognize that the threat of war and Fascism is a genuine one At our first Quadrennial Convention held last spring, we went on record in condemnation of war and our convention passed a resolution rebuking Hearst and condemning the Fascism into which he would lead this country. It seems to me, therefore, that your purpose is harmonious with the principles of this organization"

Besides these individual leaders who have spoken for or supported the League from time to time, there atre numerous labor groups that are actively affiliated with the League. In New York city alone over 40 local unions are affiliated. The Pontiac, Michigan, and Kenosha, Wisconsin, Central Labor Unions are also affiliated. On the west coast a number of the water front unions work jointly with the American League. The recent International Convention of the American Federation of Teachers voted to cooperate with the American League. The recent convention of the Bakery Workers Union endorsed the League program and voted to cooperate

In the light of all this evidence and even more that can be presented, the true position of organized labor in relation to the American League Against War and Fascism is clearly revealed The active cooperation of these leaders and unions and the wide spread willingness to cooperate on the part of others indicate that the statement of William Green does not represent the attitude of organized labor in the United States in regard to the American League and the fight against war and Fascism.

The implication of Mr. Green's letter is that the American League is a Communist organization because Communists had an active part in its First Congress. The American League Against War and Fascism was founded at the First U. S Congress Against War, held in New York city in September, 1933. The steering committee which organized this congress was composed of Communists and non-Communists, the latter being the majority. Communists have continued in positions of prominence in the League, but they have not given a Communistic slant to the program or policies of the League. It is natural enough that they should be proud of their part in founding the League, and should claim a large share of credit for its successes, but this does not mean that the League is in any sense Communist controlled.

Regarding membership and personnel, the ratio of Communists to non-Communists on the controlling committees, in offices and in the membership of the League is that of a small minority—one of the six elected national officers, two of the fifteen members of the National Bureau, and less than one-fourth of the eighty members of the National Executive Committee

Membership in the League is open to all groups and individuals who are opposed to war and Fascism. There is no other requirement Communists and Socialists, the Communist Party Opposition and Farmer-Labor groups, Epics, Utopians, Democrats and Republicans have taken part in official League meetings and activities

All are welcome The program of none predominates Each finds its cooperative basis of action in the common program of the League The Communist Party as an affiliate of the League confines its activities to the ten-point program, just as all other affiliates do It, like the other National Affiliates, is represented officially on the National Executive Committee of the League.

The League's program represents the common agreement of many diverse groups Some of its member organizations, like the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, have long had explicit programs of their own against war and Fascism. But the American League's program does not follow that of any other organization. Its similarity to that of any member organization is only on points of common agreement concerning war and Fascism. The policies of the American League are quite separate from those of the Communist Party. The organizations affiliated with the League have distinctive programs of their own, but these differing views do not commit the League as such to any program but its own, which is the common denominator of all in fighting war and Fascism.

In the interests of getting a complete picture of the situation we trust that you will provide the people of Kingston with the opportunity to study the facts presented in this letter.

Sincerely yours,
PAUL M. REID,
Executive Secretary.

Landon Will Root for Kansas

Tokepa, Kas., Oct. 3 (AP)—A dyed in the wool football fan, Gov Alf M. Landon was eager today to "root" for Kansas—with Mrs. Landon just as eager to yell for the other side.

Their alma maters are clashing on the gridiron.

The Republican presidential nominee invited Paul Block, the publisher, for an early luncheon at the executive mansion before motoring to Lawrence for the game between Washburn College of Topeka and the University of Kansas.

Landon, an alumnus of the university, has been known to sit through the most inclement weather for the privilege of watching his Jayhawkers battle. Mrs. Landon was graduated from Washburn—and that left Peggy Ann, the governor's daughter, swinging the balance. She is a student at the university.

Landon already has attended one football game in the east and has under consideration seeing another on a later campaign swing.

Workmen returning to a stone quarry near Hogansville, Ga., found their machinery gone and a lake in the quarry's place.

"Steamboat House," in which Gen. Sam Houston died in 1863, has been restored to its original form and is a show-place at Huntsville, Tex.

Skilled Labor
141 Northern Boulevard
Albany, N. Y.
October 4, 1936.

To the Editor:

The repeated comments in the press concerning the alleged decline of available skilled labor in this country, and usually coming from non-industrial sources, are not borne out by fact.

I maintain that there is at present sufficient skilled labor to meet all the needs of industry. The answer lies in the discriminatory practices against middle-aged artisans who, after they have reached the age of forty, are no longer considered for position. This is not only a waste of good labor, it comes close to being a crime against humanity.

Let us stop this practice of scrapping those who have achieved mature artisanship, for though they might have lost the spriteliness of youth, they more than make up that deficiency by steadiness of work and knowledge of their craft.

One of America's greatest problems is to provide work for the man and woman over forty, and by solving it we will answer those who seem so worried over the purported decline in the numbers of those skilled in the trades.

Former Director of New York City's Free Employment Agency.

Ewig Asks Stay In Liquor Action

Arthur Ewig appeared before Justice Harry E. Schirick in supreme court Friday and made application for a stay of trial of an action brought by William C. Herrick against Colonial Liquor Corporation of Kingston. The application was made on the grounds that already an action exists in this county in which the Colonial Liquor Corporation is the plaintiff against Herrick. Disposition of the action here he said would also clear up the action in Saratoga county where the company is being sued by Herrick for two months' rent of a building in Albany which Herrick claims was leased for warehouse purposes but which the company has never taken over under the lease.

Mr Ewig asked the court to stay that action in Saratoga county until an action to rescind the lease now pending in Ulster county is tried. Disposition of this action he said would also dispose of the action upstate.

He stated to the court that the company did enter into a lease for a building in Albany for warehouse purposes but when the owner attempted to have the place fitted for the company certain fire rules and other regulations in Albany prevented the use of the building for the purposes sought and an action is now brought to rescind the lease. In the action in Saratoga Herrick seeks to collect rent. Mr Ewig argued that if the Saratoga action was stayed the whole matter could be threshed out in the lease action here instead of having a multiplicity of actions as each month's rent becomes due. The action in Ulster county is an action in equity.
